

PLANS AUTOMOBILE LISTS ASSOCIATION

New Club Will Be of the Result of
The Four States
Tour.

VISITORS PRAISE SEYMOUR.

Declare That it is the Livest City
They Visited While on Their Long Trip.

One important result of the very successful reception and meet which the enterprising Commercial Club gave yesterday to the Four States Auto Tourists will be the organization of a local Automobile Lists Association which will become a branch of the State and National Associations.

The organization of the local Club will probably take place next week when Mr. W. S. Gilbreath, secretary of the Hoosier Motor Club, who was here with the other motorists yesterday, will be present to explain the purpose of the local association and assist in its organization.

The purpose of such an organization is, of course, a social one to begin with, but the principal thing to be brought about by such an organization is to work in interest of good roads. It is well known how necessary good roads are to the welfare of this community and anything that can help this idea along will certainly meet with the approval and assistance of every citizen.

There will be no conflict at all with the Good Roads Committee recently organized by the Commercial Club, but one will act with the other and no doubt the membership or both will be very largely the same people.

At any rate, the idea of a local Automobile Association will bring about good results in more ways than one and it is to be hoped that all will be boosters in this line as well as in every other that is for the good of Seymour.

The verdict of the automobile men was that Seymour was the livest and most up-to-date town they had visited on the entire trip which was made through Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana. The motorists were more than pleased with the entertainment which was arranged for them by the Commercial Club and pronounced it as the most enjoyable they had on the trip. After the close of the entertainment, the visitors were escorted to the city limits and in their honor several blocks of the new cement streets were opened. In leaving the town, the party went on West Second to Walnut, on Walnut to Fourth and on Fourth street passed through the driveway between the residences of T. S. Blish and M. S. Blish and proceeded north on the new improved streets on Chestnut. After reaching Rockford they took the Azalia road to Columbus.

The visitors made special mention of the McCoy-Thompson Garage, and said that it was one of the best adapted buildings for garage purposes that they had seen on the outing.

They were very profuse in their thanks to the Commercial Club and to the citizens of Seymour for the entertainment which was provided for them, and practically every man in the crowd took occasion to thank the directors of the Commercial Club and the members of the arrangement committee several times before they departed.

During the speeches of Judge O. H. Montgomery, Judge John M. Lewis and J. H. Matlock, it was stated that the refreshments which were served were Jackson County products. It was impressed upon the visitors that the ice cream was manufactured in Seymour and that the ice used in freezing the cream was also a local product. The visitors were greatly pleased with the quality of the melons which were served, and many of them stated that they were the best they had ever tasted.

At Columbus last night the tourists were given a reception by the merchants of that city, and this afternoon they will arrive in Indianapolis where a big banquet and celebration will be given in their honor, as today closes the long tour which has been in progress since July 9.

SEYMOUR VISITED BY BIG FIRE ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

Conflagration Resulting in Loss of $65,000 Occurred on Morning of July 25, 1911.

One year ago today the city fire department was busily engaged in extinguishing the flames of one of the biggest fires Seymour ever experienced. The alarm was sounded shortly after 1 o'clock on the morning of July 25, 1911 and the fire was not entirely out until the following day. The fire originated in the building of the Seymour Poultry Company, but it was not known how the blaze caught as there was no fire in the building on the day preceding the conflagration and none of the employees smoked while on duty. The total loss amounted to about $65,000.

Since the fire, however, many improvements have been made in that district and a number of the buildings destroyed or damaged have been rebuilt or remodeled. The buildings occupied by John Dehler and William Stratton have been remodeled, and the old building occupied by the Union Hardware Company has been replaced by a modern up-to-date store room. The building which was occupied by Arthur W. Spreen was totally destroyed and an entirely new building has been erected. Many other improvements have been made on Tipton and Chestnut streets.

DETECTIVE ARRESTED MAN HERE WANTED AT COLUMBUS

Stranger Wanted Upon Larceny Charge, Alleged to Have Broken in Car.

Detective Whiteman of the Pennsylvania lines arrested a man by the name of Graham here upon a charge of larceny. Graham was suspected of being guilty of breaking into a box car at Columbus and stealing some chocolate and cakes which were billed to Richmond. The car had been checked and the goods were stolen after that time. Graham was placed in the Seymour police station awaiting his return to Columbus. He said that he had purchased the chocolate at Indianapolis from a street vendor but was unable to tell upon what street the dealer was located or to give any description of the man. He further said that he would not recognize him if he saw him. He said that he had some trouble with his wife in Iowa and in that state he had gone under the name of Green, but for some time had been working in Chicago as an electrician. He was on his way to Louisville, he said, where he hoped to secure employment in his line.

BROWNSTOWN MARSHAL IS UNABLE TO IDENTIFY MAN

Stranger Said to Be From That Town
Was Killed in Aurora Railroad Yards.

Marshal John Russell has been asked to assist Marshal Cox at Aurora in identifying a stranger who was killed at that place last Thursday. A description of the man was given but as his name was not known, the Brownstown official has been unable to give any information. The stranger told a number of people at Aurora that his home was at Brownstown but no one seems to have heard him mention his name. He was killed by a switch engine in the Aurora yards, and for several days before the fatal accident went about the city begging from several of the residents.

Mr. Russell has made some investigation regarding the man and has inquired of a number of people but no one seems to be able to identify him from the description given. The letter received by the Brownstown official is as follows:

Brownstown, Ind.
Dear Sir:—On the 18th of this month there was a young man killed by being run over by a switch engine in the yards located in our city. He was a man about 20 or 23 years of age, dark red hair, grey eyes, light complexioned, about 5 feet, 6 inches in height, weigh probably 130 pounds. He had a crippled left hand, the arm looking like it might have been deformed by sickness in childhood. Outside of the letter (S) tattooed on the back of the left hand there was absolutely no marks of identification on the body when found. He was begging while here and to some of our people he said he belonged in Brownstown. Will you please make an investigation and see whether he did or not, and let me know.

Yours Very Truly,
James C. Cox, Chief of Police.

GEMS AND JEWELRY FOUND IN RUBBISH

Many Valuable Articles Are Discovered While Sorting Paper at the Brownstown Mill.

MASONIC EMBLEM IS RETURNED

Badge Valued at $40 Lost by Louisville Wholesale Dealer Located In The Trash.

Frequently many articles of value are found by the employees of the Brownstown Paper Mill while sorting paper and other rubbish sent from all parts of the country to that plant. The loss of the articles by their owners show how careless many people are and also that many articles will find their way into the waste paper basket or rubbish piles although the trash may be examined several times before it is sold.

A few days ago while J. I. Kindred was sorting some paper at the mill he found a diamond and when it was tested and examined it proved to be worth about $100. A short time ago Arthur Duncan, an employee of the mill, found a Masonic emblem among some scraps of paper. An examination of the badge showed that the initials of the owner had been engraved upon the reverse side and from the other markings it was seen that the owner was a member of some Louisville lodge. As the badge seemed to be a valuable one, it was given to Rev. L. V. Rule, who stops at Louisville in coming to and from Brownstown and he made some inquiry among the Masonic officials at Louisville. It was soon found that the owner was J. J.

Blum of Blum Bros., wholesale notion dealers. Mr. Blum said that he had lost the emblem about three weeks before it was found at the Brownstown mill and that it was valued at $40. Mr. Duncan was rewarded very liberally for returning the emblem.

A number of smaller articles are found in the bales of paper, some of which are of considerable value and doubtless the owners would be very glad to pay liberally for their return if they knew where they were. Most of the articles, however, are without a name or initials and it is impossible to tell to whom they belong.

Not long ago one of the employees found a box of shirt waists marked at $3 each and another found a silk waist pattern, which had probably fallen on the floor in some department store and swept out with the trash.

Books are often found in the bales of paper and only a short time ago a new bible still in the original box was discovered. Probably the most common articles lost are knives, gloves, ribbons and money. Most of the money, however, is in coins, although recently a large piece of a $20 bill was found among some rubbish. Whenever possible the money or other articles, which are found, are returned to their owners.

During the past few days a large number of people have come to the Republican office to inspect the first proofs of the city directory, which will be included in the county directory, to be issued this fall. It has been found that work has been done by the canvassers in a very thorough manner, and although the closest inspection has been made by the people who have visited the office, only a few errors have been detected. The proofs are still on file for the examination of the public, and all persons who are interested are given an invitation to inspect the names and make any corrections before the directory is placed in permanent form.

Mrs. Nettie Hess of Crothersville was admitted to the Schneck hospital Wednesday for treatment.

MUCH PROPERTY IS DAMAGED

As Water Recede People Viewed Scenes of Desolation.—Many Miners Are Lost.

Pittsburg, July 25.—Death and desolation spread broadcast over the southwest part of Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and West Virginia yesterday and last night, through cloud-bursts and overflowing streams. Three score or more lives were lost. The damage to homes and industries can not be estimated. Fifteen lives were snuffed out in Superba mine No. 2, near Uniontown, seven miners narrowly escaped death, while from many other parts came reports of lives lost by the mountain torrents rushing into mine slopes.

Hundreds of families, deserting homes in a mad rush for safety on the mountainsides, sought shelter beneath improvised shacks and tents, toward the construction of which every available piece of debris was turned to account. At daybreak shivering women and children gazed over a scene of desolation in the upper Youghiogheny valley and as the waters receded upturned dwellings, shattered buildings and crumbled piles of mortar were held in a conglomerate mass by a railroad bridge or trustle, or the progress of the debris had been impeded by some larger and stancher building.

As the waters cleared away today the stricken community gazed aghast at the power of the elements. Heavy rocks had been split. Heavy railroad iron had been lifted from almost solid beds and dropped into rivers, while on all sides deep scars marked the surface of earth where the crowding waters made new courses for themselves.

Trowbridge.

Sheriff Jerry McOsker, who started yesterday for Ft. Scott, Kansas, to bring back Bruce Trowbridge, who is wanted here upon a burglary charge, returned to Brownstown yesterday to get some additional evidence so that the proper requisitions could be obtained from the governor's office. Several days ago Sheriff McOsker informed the chief of police at Ft. Scott to arrest Trowbridge if found there and if he would not return with the requisition papers to notify him. The message to Sheriff McOsker instructed him to bring the requisition papers which indicated that Trowbridge would require all the legal formalities.

After securing the necessary evidence it will be necessary for Sheriff McOsker to obtain the papers and then have the requisition granted by the Kansas Governor before Trowbridge can be brought back here. He returned to Indianapolis today and will proceed immediately to Topeka.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

Heart to Heart Talks.

WHO MADE HIM BAD?

Old man Fritts ran away from his family when Johnny Fritts was nine years of age, and the Fritts family had a hard time to get along. The mother went out to work, and Johnny grew up with the weeds in the town streets. Whatever mischief might be done by the boys of the village most of it was laid to Johnny. Often the good wives lectured their young sons, using Johnny Fritts as the horrible example of wayward youth.

Johnny's habits, indeed, were bad enough. He smoked and chewed and drank and swore, and nobody cared.

One night a drug store was burglarized and cigars and whisky and a few stamps taken, whereat the local sleuths, working on the theory like father like son, arrested Johnny Fritts.

He was sent to the reformatory on general principles.

They did give old man Fritts' son a chance in the reform school, and Johnny became a model. After he had been there a year with a perfect record he asked for a parole, to which he was entitled.

They turned him down chiefly because he was old man Fritts' son. Other boys who had committed graver crimes got their paroles on lesser showing. They had a pull.

Again, at the end of a second year, with a 100 per cent showing on conduct, Johnny Fritts asked for his parole, and it was refused.

What was the use of being good? Young Fritts brooded over his unjust treatment and became one of the worst boys in the reform school, and they put him in a little iron cage too narrow to sit down in eight hours at a stretch.

Rebellious, defiant, a guard tried to punish him, and he killed the guard.

He was sentenced to be hanged and taken to the penitentiary. And there he met—whom?

Old John Fritts!

Convict No. 3055 looked through the bars of the death room at convict No. 5019 and exclaimed, "My God! It's my Johnny! He has his mother's eyes!"

Who made Johnny Fritts a criminal? Heredity in old Nelson Fritts, environment in a neglected boyhood.

Is that all?

No! Add to heredity and environment the cruel injustice of a state!

MAKE START

Prudent Man Begins With Savings Bank

By JOHN M. OSKISON

FOR the average man, as the Business Almanac points out, all investment starts with the savings bank. A few men make money suddenly or inherit a considerable amount and become sudden investors. The rule is that a man must be a saver of money for a considerable time before he becomes a buyer of securities. So the first and most vital question is, "What shall I do with my small savings?"

There are more than forty forms of co-operative, mutual benefit, savings and other similar associations in the United States. They are organized to take care of savings in any amount from the smallest to the greatest sums. Many of them are excellently managed, honest in intent and are worthy of encouragement. Some are properly looked upon with suspicion.

Most generally used, of course, are the savings banks. They have been tried by fire. Speaking generally, they are the most secure financial institutions we have. Our states have wisely regulated their operations—most of them have. Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York have done best. Ohio has a good law. Less protection for the savings bank depositor is offered in the south and west than is judged wise to furnish in the east. Here are some of the prohibitions the New York law puts upon its savings institutions:

They cannot loan money on notes, drafts, bills of exchange or any personal securities whatever.

They cannot buy stocks.

They cannot buy bonds or other forms of security issued by any industrial, manufacturing or street railway company.

They cannot buy or loan money on farm lands nor on mortgages outside of New York state.

They cannot buy bonds which are not, at least in part, first mortgages on the property bonded.

They cannot buy real estate bonds or mortgages until after a committee of the bank's trustees makes a thorough examination of the property on which the bonds or mortgages are to be placed.

All of these restrictions are salutary. They indicate some of the safeguards a prudent man ought to throw around his savings and also the tests he ought to make of his investment selections.

Upon the authority of a Chicago physician it was recently asserted that to deprive the human race of salt for even a few months would have a disastrous effect upon the health of the people. This, I believe, has always been the teaching of our textbooks, and I am not prepared to dispute its truth, in so far as civilized man is concerned.

There are, however, upon this earth many animals, wild or domestic, which get little or no salt and yet are healthy. True, they have a craving for it, as is shown by the fact that when given the opportunity they devour it in astonishing quantities, and hunters have long taken advantage of the fact that wild animals will return to the salt lick. But when there is no such spot known to them they live their whole lives without it.

Of the use of salt for seasoning and preserving their food the North American Indians knew absolutely nothing, yet all authorities agree they were a particularly healthy people, until they were afflicted by the white man's vices and the white man's diseases.

It is true there are some accounts to the effect that their medicine men had noted the action of animals above referred to and administered salt to their patients, and they may thus have benefited individual cases. But as a race they were a meat-eating people, without salt, and yet a healthy people.

Furthermore, white men who went among them and lived as they lived scarcely missed the salt after they became used to its absence.

The other day it was suggested again that instead of going into factories women and girls should turn more generally to housework. The suggestion is all right, but there is a big field for improvement in the life of the average woman who does housework for others, and the leading American women could do lots of good for their sex by introducing a better plan for the poor girls who do the housework.

At the present time and for as long as I can recollect girls have had to work from 6:00 a. m. to 8:00 or 9:00 p. m., without time to eat properly or to take care of their bodies. I know positively that many girls are nervous wrecks after doing this kind of work for some time.

They have Sunday evenings and Thursday afternoon to themselves, but most of them are too tired to enjoy their few hours.

In no other country are the girls forced to work so fast or to do so much in so short a time as here.

Stop this cruelty and the girls will not go to the factories or be willing to marry lazy men, drunkards and gamblers.

Pedagogy is the most neglected of all sciences. Before there are good pupils there must be good teachers. If a school system turns out inefficient, stupid graduates and that same system is responsible for the turning out of the teachers—how can the latter be anything except stupid and inefficient? The pedagogues teach the pupils—but who teaches the pedagogues? It is all a vicious circle.

The teaching faculty is a distinct faculty. A man may know all there is to know about chemistry, say, and yet not be able to impart a definite knowledge of the elementary principles of chemistry to a class. The school of the future must aim at conferring on the pupil the maximum of happiness. In happiness only is there real growth.

The educational system proceeds now upon the old medical theory that the more unpleasant a medicine tastes the better it works.

ALCOHOL IS NOT NECESSARY

Prof. Howard Marsh Gives Telling Testimony Against So-Called Drinking in Moderation.

Speaking at a largely attended conference on "The Uses of Alcohol," held recently by a thriving branch of the C. E. Temperance society at Cambridge, Eng., and addressed by the eminent professors of medicine, pathology and surgery in the university, Prof. Howard Marsh gave telling testimony against the use of alcoholic drink even in so-called moderate quantities.

In opening his address he said that he had been interested in this question for a very long time, and could say with all modesty, for he was only expressing his own opinion, that he had come to very definite conclusions upon it. The first was that even in moderation, and except for medical purposes, alcohol was perfectly unnecessary. The Japs never used it, yet how well they had done in war. A similar illustration was afforded by the brave native Sikh regiment, total abstainers. He had an example a short time ago when he sent a somewhat venturesome invitation to Sir Robert Baden-Powell to come down and inspect the Cambridge Scouts. He first sent his aide-de-camp to see whether it was worth his while to come. He came and lunched at Downing college. He was about twenty-eight years old, five feet ten inches in height, and with as clear a complexion and as bright an eye as one would see, and he knew what sort of young fellow he must be to be Baden-Powell's right-hand man. He was struck by the fact that the young fellow, as splendid a young animal man as one could meet anywhere, proved to be a vegetarian, an abstainer, and a non-smoker. The tennis champion—not lawn tennis, nice as it might be, but the real thing—his old friend, Mr. Neville Lytton, was an abstainer. He (the speaker) used to play golf a great deal, and they were often struck with admiration at the way the great player Taylor played, with marvelous precision. There was no one who could hold him. He specially asked if he was a teetotaler, and the reply was, "Of course he is; if he were not he could not play like that."

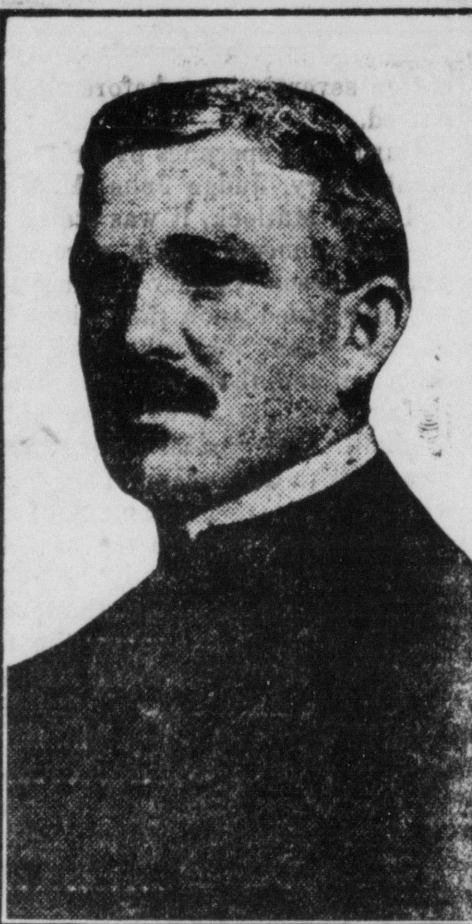

He did not believe that alcohol was necessary as a food, although he could not say anything in the presence of Sir Clifford Allbutt about its use as a medicine, though he did say that in some other circumstances it was harmful in a very definite degree. Take the case of contests of physical power. Did they think a man would take a large dose of alcohol and expect to win the king's prize? They might be perfectly certain that if he did he would not be able to "shoot for nuts." In the case of an ordinary social party made up of young fellows from the services, they knew that if they dined heartily with wine overnight they could not shoot next morning. The best shot in England, if he indulged to any extent in champagne overnight, would be unable to hit more than one pheasant out of five the next morning. Alcohol even in moderate amount unfitted him for skilled work. In golf he had known people who showed at once whether they took alcohol or not. A man might play splendidly in the morning, but if he had a couple of whiskies and sodas at lunch, his play would fall off in the afternoon. Another thing had struck him. That among so-called moderate drinkers, young men from twenty-five to thirty-five might drink wine pretty freely, but they would often hear a man say at forty: "I can't drink as I used to do; wine does not agree with me now." That just showed that while in the very prime of their physical life they might seem to find no very serious effects, as soon as any of their organs began to flag they could plainly see the injurious effects.

He was delighted at the changes for the better going on in England now. The other day he was dining at Woolwich and saw at least five-sixths of the young officers present were drinking nothing stronger than lemonade. At least 70,000 men in the army today were teetotalers. He thought that a splendid thing, because with that many teetotalers in the army, the whole would be teetotal before long. He was glad that the opinion formed by intelligent people in an intellectual society today was that alcohol was unnecessary. It was of the greatest assistance to the poorer classes nowadays that they could get a good cup of hot coffee or milk and a piece of bread and butter instead of a glass of adulterated beer. Things had been thrown into beer in the past which increased a man's craving for it. Now that these men could get coffee or milk they said, "That's the thing for me." He believed that was one of the best and most powerful influences at work today. It would be the greatest thing if everybody would make up their minds to start their children afresh and right and bring them up as total abstainers, for he believed that if they were never given wine or beer as children they would never want it. If they did not teach a child that alcohol was necessary they would find that he would never want it.

No Useful Effects.

"There seems no useful effects to be anticipated from the use of alcohol in health"—Dr. Parks.

NEW BAND AT STATE FAIR

PATRICK CONWAY.

The Patrick Conway band of New York, foremost among the great concert bands of America, will give afternoon concerts in the state fair coliseum, week of Sept. 2.

STATE FAIR'S EXTENT

INDIANA EXPOSITION WILL OVERFLOW WITH ATTRACTIONS.

Strong Features for City, Town and Country People Each Day and Night—Education for the Farm Men and Women.

The Indiana state fair, highly flavored with educational interest and entertaining features which appeal strongly to men, women and children from farm, town and city, will open its fifty-ninth exposition, at Indianapolis, on Labor Day, Sept. 2, and for five days and nights Hoosiers by the tens of thousands will attend this the one great event of the Indiana year which all people without caste or class enjoy.

For people who go to the fair largely for entertainment, the exposition will offer a great array of attractions in concerts by four large bands, livestock shows and parades, a great building filled to capacity with fine art display, a rich show of Hoosier orchard and vineyard products, and another of poultry; trotting and racing, a "midway" of carnival shows. In addition to all of these features which will alike interest and entertain people from town and farm, the fair will especially emphasize educational factors as magnets for men and women who are developing the great resources of the Hoosier soil. The very best that the state is yielding in agricultural, horticultural, dairy products and blue blooded stock will be shown in endless array that the people from the farms may compare the displays with the yields of their own lands, and the fair exhibits will offer inspiration to men and women who strive for greater quality and quantity, for greater wealth and comforts which are sure to come from work intelligently done at home. Nearly forty acres of machinery for use in field, orchard, dairy and farm home will point out to fair visitors from the country the way to economize in their work and still achieve greater results.

Combined with these educational examples which appeal to the eye, the fair will offer instructions of an intensely practical kind to farm workers in lectures and demonstrations on a long list of subjects. This instruction will be of collegiate quality for men and women who cannot take the time to attend an agricultural university. Farm chemistry, feed for live stock, crop and weed seeds, milk testing and butter making, reviving old orchards and the development of new, and household economics are some of the subjects which will be capably handled by twenty experts from Purdue university. State Entomologist Baldwin will have a large exhibit of insects that are enemies to the farm and will discuss methods of spraying for these evils and orchard diseases with which the farmer contends.

A general revision of the premium list has been made for the next fair, which is expected to increase the quality of exhibits in all departments where prize ribbons are awarded. The total prizes offered amount to $57,115, divided as follows: Races, $19,200; draft horses, $3,820; coach horses, $820; mules, $500; saddle horses, $480; saddlers in the horse show, $1,900; harness horses, $4,040; ponies, $860. This makes the total awards on horses $31,600.

In the cattle department the prizes amount to $11,133, divided as follows: Beef breeds, $7,463; dual purposes, $872; dairy, $2,800. In other departments the totals are: Dairy and creamery, $214; boys' judging contest, $250; sheep, $3,276; swine, $3,001; poultry, $2,178; agriculture, $1,392; horticulture, $858; plants and flowers, $1,032; bees and honey, $248; table luxuries, $355.75; fine arts, $1,654.50.

Odd Case of Friendship.

At the present time a most unusual case of affection between a domesticated and a comparatively wild animal is to be witnessed at the Little English hamlet of Spoonley, near Market Drayton. On the farm of Mr. William Woodburn for a week or two past, a small rough, somewhat vicious terrier from the farmstead has been noticed gambolling in the fields with a large well-developed hare. Such an attachment is most uncommon.

Cuckoo Superstitions.

In Norfolk (England) people believe that whatever you are doing the first time you hear the cuckoo will be the thing you are destined to do most frequently throughout the coming year. Another popular superstition is that an unmarried person will remain single as many years as the number of times the cuckoo, when first heard, utters its call.

Two Interesting Patents.

Among recent patents which attract attention by reason of their novelty are one for making sausages without casings (a searing process) and one for an illuminated flat iron. The latter contrivance is described as containing incandescent light bulbs which serve at the same time to heat the iron and to illuminate the work which is being ironed.

HONEYTOWN.

Mrs. Charles Goens and little son, Marshall, went to Terre Haute Wednesday to visit friends a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Robertson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Manion at Shields.

Charlie Bennett of Peru was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Bennett a few days this week.

The barn on Henry Mellenkamp's farm was struck by lightning Sunday afternoon and was considerably damaged. Wm. Butler and family spent Sunday with Luther Browning and family at Pleasant Grove.

James Ewing and little grandson, Ewing, and Morris Lynch, of Tunnelton, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Ewing and children of Mitchell and Mrs. L. S. Robertson of Brownstown were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Robertson.

A large crowd gathered at the river Sunday afternoon to witness the baptismal services to be conducted there, but on account of the heavy rains that fell the minister failed to come and the services were postponed until some future time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Spray and little daughter, Opal, of near Seymour spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Sewell. Thomas and Garfield Cross are having a new barn built. G. D. Russell is doing the work.

MEXICO ACTING IN GOOD FAITH

At Least That Is Mr. Knox's View of It.

DISCUSSES BORDER CLAIMS

Recent Senatorial Criticism of State Department's Attitude Toward the Claims of Americans For Injuries Received in Border Warfare Leads to Official Statement Upholding the Course of the Mexican Government.

Washington, July 25.—Upon his return to his office from a trip to his summer home at Valley Forge, Pa., Secretary of State Knox at once took up the matter of the sensational attack on the state department and the Mexican government made by Senator Fall of New Mexico on Monday. Mr. Knox declined to discuss the attack, but will probably draft an answer to the charges, which will be issued within a few days.

State department officials confirm a statement issued by the Mexican foreign minister, in which he says that the Mexican government has adjudicated a number of the claims of American citizens growing out of firing across the border at El Paso, Tex., and Douglas, Ariz.

The attitude of the Mexican government, in considering the claims has been satisfactory to the state department. There has been some co-operation between the two departments to determine the validity or genuineness of the claims. Some time ago the Mexican foreign office notified the state department that awards have been decided on in connection with the claims at Douglas and that the money for their payment had been sent to the Mexican consul there. This money will be paid to those whose cases have been personally examined by the consul and approved by him.

The Mexican government, according to the state department, appears to be acting in good faith and anxious to adjust all the claims.

PUT STOP TO IT

Abuse of General Delivery Postal Window to Be Corrected.

Washington, July 25.—Flirting and "making dates" through general delivery mail are to be broken up by the postoffice department. An order has been issued to all postmasters to follow more closely the regulations with regard to persons who use the general delivery. Minors will no longer be permitted to receive mail at the general delivery windows, but must get it at their homes.

Under the regulations postmasters may require all persons to furnish in writing their names and addresses and statements of their reasons for preferring to be served at the general delivery.

Driven Back by Blizzards.

Fairbanks, Alaska, July 25.—After having climbed four miles up the steep sides of Mt. McKinley to a point within about 264 feet of the summit, Prof. Herschell Parker of Columbia and Belmont Brown of Tacoma gave up their efforts to reach the goal, and are on their way home. Severe blizzards about the summit prevented the scaling of the peaks.

Tombstone Crushed Child to Death.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 25.—A tombstone weighing a ton toppled over in the Kadaline cemetery while the funeral of John D. Rockefeller of Tivoli, a distant kinsman of the oil king, was in progress, and crushed to death a child named Raymond Callender, aged four, who was playing with his little sister at the base of the stone.

An Aggrieved Client Shoots.

New York, July 25.—Joseph Fetter, a lawyer, was shot in his office on the ninth floor of the old Times building by Joseph Conroy, a machinist, who fancied he had been ill-used in a lawsuit wherein Fetter was referee. Fetter was wounded in the abdomen and died an hour later. Conroy was arrested.

Another Aviation Accident.

Hempstead, N. Y., July 25.—Edson F. Gallaudet, a wealthy amateur aviator, well known in New York and Washington, while flying in Hempstead plains, fell with his machine from a height of about 100 feet and was seriously injured.

FACTIONAL TROUBLE AIRED IN THE HOUSE

Mondell and Norris Go to It Hot and Heavy.

Washington, July 25.—Regular leaders and near progressives who had hoped that the factional fight started in the Chicago convention would not be injected into congress were indignant when a lot of soiled Republican linen was displayed in the house of representatives. Representative Mondell of Wyoming, a regular, who served on the credentials committee at Chicago, and Representative Norris of Nevada, a progressive, who has fought President Taft consistently, engaged in a war of words that was applauded by the Democrats, but was received almost in silence by the Republican side. Representative Mondell spoke for more than three hours. He scored Colonel Roosevelt. Representative Norris followed Mr. Mondell.

The indications are that for the rest of the sessions the house debates will be full of the Chicago convention fight. Mr. Mondell's speech was a strong one from the Taft standpoint, and Mr. Norris was bitter in his denunciation of the course followed by the Taft forces at Chicago.

SLOW PROGRESS IN GRAFT CASE

New York Authorities Facing Difficult Problem.

UP AGAINST A WILY CROWD

Out of the Confusion of Tales Told by Those Suspected of a Knowledge of the Conspiracy Which Led to the Killing of State's Chief Witness in Police Graft Inquiry a Few Facts Seem Conclusive.

New York, July 25.—The district attorney wants to know from Lieutenant Charles Becker why he is so interested in the grand jury proceedings. The grand jury is going not merely into the accusations that Becker was a grafter, but is considering also the testimony of Herman Rosenthal's relatives and friends that the gambler believed the police would kill him.

Otto Aversi, the chauffeur who has been wheeling Becker around town for more than a year, admitted that he went straight to the lieutenant at police headquarters on Monday afternoon after telling the grand jury that Becker had coached him about what to say. If Becker is willing to appear before the grand jury he will be asked about this conference and Aversi will be requested.

The discovery that Aversi rushed to Becker from the grand jury room was made just before Joseph Immerman, a brother of Mrs. Rosenthal, told the grand jury that Rosenthal had told him that he was afraid of Becker, and had described the relations that existed, he said, between the lieutenant of police and the gambler and Jack Rose. Statements made by Immerman as to the profitable dealings of policemen with gamblers will be thrashed out by the grand jury. Inspectors Hayes and Lahey and Captain Day of the West Forty-seventh street station have been subpoenaed to appear.

No apparent progress has been made in locating the men who are wanted for the actual killing of Rosenthal or in tracing the plot back to the policemen that the district attorney believe had most at stake in the murder. John Reiser, gambler, actor and sporting man, was held without bail on a charge of perjury. Reiser told the district attorney, that official says, that he saw Bridge Webber running away from the Metropole just after Rosenthal had been shot. But before Coroner Feiberg in the hearing as to whether Bridge was to be held for murder in the first degree, Reiser looked over the courtroom crowded with gangsters and gunmen, an array that had been smiling and signalling to Sam Paul and Bridge Webber, and then denied that he had said anything of the sort. After Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss had corroborated the district attorney's statement, Reiser was arrested.

The district attorney agrees with Commissioner Dougherty that one or two of the men now held for murder will break down and tell the whole story. They are concentrating on Jack Rose, who is regarded as having been the general manager of the Rosenthal killing, and William Shapiro, who has been telling all sorts of stories in order to convince the authorities that he is worth bargaining with. But the district attorney has been told that Rose believes that police influence will protect him and that he halts in giving information. Rose denies that he had any knowledge even that Rosenthal was to be killed, and he says that he is just as sensitive about aspersions on his character as Becker is. Twenty-three Burns men have already been detailed for the work, and Mr. Burns himself, when he returns to New York in a day or two, will devote his entire time to the investigation.

BREAK CAMP

Hoosier Guardsmen Conclude Profitable Ten Days' Drill.

Indianapolis, July 25.—The Indiana national guard, after ten days of the most strenuous work it has ever experienced in a camp of instruction, has departed from Fort Benjamin Harrison for home. The brigade disbanded yesterday afternoon and the guardsmen headed for every corner of Indiana by both steam and electric lines. Only a few men in the outfit complained of the hard work given them during the last ten days; in fact, the majority of the officers and men readily voted the camp the most beneficial in the history of the guard.

The Sixth Ohio regiment, Colonel Lloyd W. Howard of Toledo commanding, arrived at Fort Harrison this morning.

DEMOCRATS OPPOSE INCREASE OF NAVY

Third Caucus Lines Up as Did Others.

Washington, July 25.—Last night the Democrats of the house again went on record as opposed to any additions to the battleship fleet. This unexpected action, apparently, destroys all hope of the navy for obtaining even one battleship from the present session of congress.

The action of the house Democrats was taken in opposition to the wishes of Leader Underwood, and also it is understood, in opposition to the desire of Woodrow Wilson. By several Democratic leaders it is contended even that this action by the caucus was a violation of the platform adopted at Baltimore, which pledges the party to provide for "an adequate navy" for national defense.

Considerable comment was caused by the fact that Speaker Clark voted in the caucus against any addition to the battleship fleet. Last night's caucus was the third that the Democrats have held on this subject, and in each instance they have voted against appropriations for any additions to the navy. The question of public buildings figures in the vote as it has figured in the two previous votes by the Democrats. Only a bare majority of the house Democrats were present at the caucus. The fight against the battleship program was led by Representative Burnett of Alabama, who has insisted from the beginning that not a dollar should be allowed for battleships unless $2,000,000 or more was provided for public buildings.

A resolution authorizing one battleship was offered by Representative Padgett of Tennessee, chairman of the naval committee. It was defeated by a vote of 70 to 62. The passage of the entire naval bill is menaced as a result of these developments.

RESISTS TAXES AGAINST STOCK

Express Company Renews Suit In Federal Court.

DENIES TAX BOARD'S RIGHT

Contending That the State Has No Right to Appraise Capital Stock, the Adams Express Company Asks For Injunction Requiring Taxing Board to Assess Only Actual Value of Company's Physical Property in Indiana.

Indianapolis, July 25.—Suit has been filed in the federal court by W. M. Barrett, president of the Adams Express company, against W. H. O'Brien, auditor of state, in which the court is asked to issue an injunction to prevent the auditor of state from certifying to the auditors of counties through which the lines of the company pass the valuation placed by the state tax board on the Adams Express company's property in Indiana.

The complaint sets out that the actual value of the company's physical property in Indiana is $68,982, while the state tax board placed the valuation at $578,208. In arriving at this latter valuation the state tax board, it is alleged, estimated the value of the express company's capital stock to be worth $380 a share, and then apportioned the valuation of the stock according to the mileage of the company in this state.

The complaint denies the right of the state tax board to make the appraisal in this manner, and says that the board had no right to place a valuation on anything more than the $68,982 worth of actual personal property in the state. The suit is similar to other suits filed by the same company against the auditor of state for the same purpose in the last two or three years and which are still pending in federal court.

NEW LAW SOUGHT

Indiana Motion Picture Operators Want State Censorship.

Indianapolis, July 25.—The Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' league will ask the next state legislature to enact a law for the creation of a state board of censorship to pass on all motion picture films before they may be exhibited in the picture shows throughout the state. This was decided on at the meeting of the league held here, and is in line with the policy of the National League of Motion Picture Exhibitors. The meeting placed in the hands of F. J. Rembusch of Shelbyville and H. W. Summers of Indianapolis, the duty of preparing the bill and engineering its enactment into law. The members present all voted in favor of the proposition for state censorship. It was pointed out that this plan would assist in the uplift of the motion picture business and that it would help to place it on the high plane where it belonged. There are state organizations of motion picture men in fifteen states and all of these will seek state censorship laws at the hands of their legislatures.

Labor Famine at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, July 25.—Contractors for public improvements and city officials say there is a genuine labor famine in the city and that unless it is relieved shortly a large number of contracts will have to be carried over until next year uncompleted. At present several contracts have been stopped from lack of men, while on many contracts barely more than one-tenth of the number of men necessary are at work.

Sudden Death Excites Suspicion.

Lafayette, Ind., July 25.—Daisy Gladys Wilt, a fourteen-year-old school girl, was found dead in bed at the home of her mother, Mrs. James Scarlett, and Coroner Vanrede is making a rigid investigation of the case. The young woman had been troubled with a stomach ailment, but her condition was not deemed serious.

Heavy Loss to the State.

Indianapolis, July 25.—Personal property valuations in the ninety-one counties of the state outside of Marion county, as fixed by county and township assessing officials this year, fell off $5,373,805, as compared with the total like valuation of last year, according to abstracts filed with the auditor of state.

GHOST DROVE PRIEST FROM PARISH HOUSE

Massachusetts Community Disturbed By Weird Business.

South Hanover, Mass., July 25.—The household of the Rev. Father C. A. Donohue, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart here, has been disrupted by a ghost. Father Donohue and his housekeeper have left the house and are now quartered with friends in the town. The entire countryside is aroused and the parish house has become known as "the haunted house."

People sat and saw tables tumbled over and shattered by unseen hands. Heavy household utensils have been borne from one place to another, beds have been stripped of their coverings and the clothing torn to shreds, and from the bedside of the pastor an alarm clock has been seized and hurled against the wall or thrown from the room by no visible agency. All sorts of noises resound through the house, while at all hours of the night tables, beds and chairs have suddenly leaped into the air and toppled over to the accompaniment of clattering dishes from the pantry shelf.

Men members of the parish who acted as guards on different occasions sat through the performance and were mystified. They confessed their inability to solve the mystery and as a result asked the pastor to desert the house, for a few days at least.

A Dangerous Game When the Leader Happens to Be Crazy.

Copenhagen, July 25.—A woman teacher of swimming went suddenly mad while instructing a lot of girls in the sea near Helsingborg. She suddenly started to swim out to sea and ordered all the girls to follow her to Elsinore, five miles away. All obeyed but one, who swam ashore and called for help. Several motor boats hastened to the rescue of the girls and picked them up at various places. The teacher was picked up just as she was going down, near Elsinore. She was taken ashore and placed in an asylum.

STATE INSANE HOSPITALS
RECEIVED 1,361 PERSONS Small Army Admitted in Year—Their Nativity and Former Residence Shown.

The board of state charities has completed an analysis of facts of 1,361 persons admitted to the state hospitals for the insane during the recent fiscal year. Of the total 595, or 43.7 per cent, were women. Concerning these persons, the board has made the following report:

"The reports show many interesting facts concerning this small army of persons, not the least important of which is their nativity. The records show that 1,185 were of native birth; 848 were born in Indiana and 337 in other states. Thirty states besides Indiana were represented in the admissions. Our neighbors on the north, east, south and west had the highest representation: Michigan 9; Ohio, 114; Kentucky, 66, and Illinois, 38. Other states east and south of Indiana are represented as follows: Delaware, 3; Maryland, 6; Massachusetts, 2; New Jersey, 2; New York, 14; North Carolina, 7; Pennsylvania, 21; Tennessee, 10; Virginia, 12; West Virginia, 6; Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina, each one. States west of us are represented as follows: Iowa, 5; Kansas, 4; Minnesota, 2; Missouri, 5; Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi, New Mexico and California, each one.

"Of those admitted last year who were born in foreign countries, 114 in all, the greatest number came from Germany (forty-four), the next from Ireland (thirteen). Eleven were reported as having come from England, nine from Hungary, eight from Austria, six from Canada, five from Russia, four each from Poland and Switzerland, two each from Bohemia, Denmark, Finland, Italy and Scotland, and one whose birthplace is given merely as Europe.

"Summarizing these figures, the result shows 1,185, or 87 per cent., native born; 114, or 8 per cent, foreign born, and 62, or 5 per cent., unknown. It must be remembered that these persons, though born in other states and other countries, were citizens of Indiana, or supposed to be, when admitted to the institutions supported by the state. The managements make careful investigation into the legal settlement of persons received and loses no time in deporting patients who are known to belong elsewhere."

COMPLIMENT GIVEN GOLD MINE AD BY WASHINGTON DEMOCRAT

Customers Crowd The Store Which Shows the Benefits of The Right Kind of Advertising.

The Washington Democrat, one of the leading papers in southern Indiana, had the following article Wednesday regarding the two page advertisement of the Gold Mine Department Store, which appeared in the Daily Republican on Tuesday:

"In the Seymour Republican the two-page advertisement which for beauty of arrangement and excellence of composition would be hard to beat. The advertisement reflects credit upon both the one who wrote the advertisement and the men who put it in type. The Seymour Republican, by the way, is one of Indiana's neatest newspapers."

The advertisement mentioned was written by Miss Ida Critcher, who has charge of the advertisement of the Gold Mine, and uses great care and displays considerable originality in the wording of the Gold Mine ads.

Incidentally the Loom End sale at the Gold Mine began this morning and as the result of the advertisement, the store was crowded during the day. The opening day is the most successful of any Loom End sale ever held by that store. The managers declared this afternoon that there was the largest crowd this morning that was ever in the store since the Gold Mine has been in business in this city and that they have done a rushing business throughout the day. The result of this sale is simply another evidence of the value of honest and consistent advertising.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. Church will give a market at the Public Service Co. Saturday commencing at 9 o'clock. Everything home made. Cakes, pies, doughnuts, bread, coffee cake etc.

Advertising Talks

RETAIL ADVERTISING

From the Viewpoint of the Country Merchant.

The following is a portion of an address delivered by David Oransky, a well-known merchant and advertiser of Atlantic, Iowa, before the meeting of the Western Iowa Editorial association at Council Bluffs:

It is a sad but too true fact that the country merchants as a rule are not extensive advertisers. I am convinced that they should advertise regularly and persistently. I believe so, not only because some people who are supposed to know say so, not only because my actual experience in connection with retail advertising in a small town has demonstrated to me the far-reaching benefits, both direct and indirect, to be derived from persistent advertising.

In this great period of advancement and progress, mere storekeepers can no longer succeed. It takes live, wide-awake, aggressive merchants to succeed today. The successful merchant of today, whether in the large city or the small town, must deal with modern conditions. One of the most important of these is the fact that this is a great age of publicity. Printer's ink is today selling more goods than ever before in the world's history and from present indications, its usefulness in this respect is only beginning.

People depend upon their newspapers and magazines for information on what to buy and where to buy. If we would be successful we must tell the public what we have to offer. We must, through the judicious use of printer's ink, convince the people that our wares are desirable and that our values are consistent with the prices asked. The ultimate end of the non-advertising retailer is very prophetically depicted in a little incident credited to Mark Twain. During Mark Twain's newspaper days, one of his readers found a spider in his copy of the paper and wrote Mark asking what it meant. The reply was that the spider was looking over the columns of the paper to ascertain who were the non-advertisers, so that he could weave his web over their doors.

So if the small town merchant does not advertise the people of his community are not advised of the fact that he has reliable and desirable goods, or that he offers excellent values. They read the announcements of the large city merchants; they are attracted to the cities or, in too many instances, they fall victim to the alluring literature of the mail order houses. Trade which rightfully belongs to them is leaving solely because of lack of publicity. For this reason it is obvious that extensive advertising is one of the strongest weapons that the country merchant possesses against the giant mail order houses.

But, if it is true that it pays the small town merchant to advertise extensively, if it is true that advertising is one of the merchant's most extensive means of combating the mighty mail order establishments, then, you ask, why is it that he advertises so little.

There appears to be two reasons. The first applies to, I hope, but a very small per cent. of the existing dealers. They are not progressive; they believe what was true ten or twenty years ago is true today; they forget that this is an age of publicity; they do not understand the mighty power of advertising; in short they are what we would term "old fogies." But, gentlemen, do not class all merchants who are not liberal users of printer's ink as back numbers.

Advertising is a difficult proposition and it is especially difficult for the small town merchant. I say, advertising pays, but that doesn't mean that if I buy large quantities of space and fill it full of type that I get results. The very fact that this is an age of publicity makes it all the more difficult to prepare winning advertisements. Hundreds of advertisements are being printed daily. The country merchant's printed announcements must compete with those of the city merchants' and mail order houses, which, by the way, are carefully prepared by advertising specialists. The advertiser must therefore make his advertisements attractive. He must study first of all the layout, he must carefully plan an arrangement so that he may obtain an effective appearance.

But although the arrangement and layout should be the first consideration of the advertiser, it is evident from the appearance of most country merchants' ads that their first consideration is the text. Here again the merchant has some difficult work mapped out for him. He must first determine what to advertise, and then comes the description and argument. Assuming that he has gained the attention of the reader, the success of the announcement now depends upon the ability of the advertiser to create a strong desire for his offering.

The most profitable and most difficult method of advertising, and which method is seldom used by the small town merchant, is to exploit the quality, style, newness, worth and desirability of his merchandise with consistent price as a minor consideration. But can you imagine the country merchant with so many different lines of goods on his shelves attempting to determine the logical items to advertise, attempting to describe the features of his merchandise which will appeal to the public, attempting to choose or rather find the words, phrases and expressions which will suggest the desirability of his wares? Does not this suggest to your mind some of the problems of the country advertiser?

Or, if he chooses the less difficult but more frequently used method of appeal, he will talk price in his announcements. He will continually be holding "special sales," selling goods for cost and less. And if he gives values even half as great as his advertisements tell about, he will find himself conducting business at a loss or, if, after leading his customers to expect wonderful bargains, he attempts to obtain regular prices, he will soon discover that his ads have lost all effectiveness.

But in this age of publicity, the public looks to the merchants' announcements, not always for the story of a wonderful bargain event, but they are expecting to find information on what is good and what is bad, information to help them decide what they want, information concerning the most advantageous place to secure what they desire.

So the successful advertiser in city or village must choose for his subjects goods in which the public is interested; he must describe the goods in an interesting, truthful and forceful manner; he must advertise frequently and regularly, but most important and difficult of all, he must make his ads attractive, appealing and easily read.

It is my opinion that the newspaper can increase the pulling power of the ads 25 to 50 per cent. by a little effort along the lines of effective display.

So, gentlemen, I say again that advertising is a most difficult proposition for the country merchant. We merchants need your co-operation and help. You publishers need our support. Let us get closer together on this problem of publicity. It must be solved by both merchant and publisher alike before either of us can succeed in the fullest measure in our undertakings.

Waiting for business to get better doesn't help improve it to any noticeable extent.

ADVERTISING GETS RETURNS

No Other Legitimate Method Equal to Publicity, Intelligently Directed, for Selling Goods.

Effort intelligently directed through publicity brings larger returns than any other legitimate method. This is often demonstrated in business of many sorts and nowhere does it show up with such continuous activity as in newspaper advertising. Rightly placed an advertisement is an invitation to a possible customer that has a vital weight. The advertisement of a reputable business, in the pages of a reputable newspaper, is illustrating the word of honor of the man behind the publicity. A merchant tells through an advertisement what he wants the public to know. He states a fact. That fact, if he is the reputable man he should be, can be depended upon, day after day and issue after issue of the paper in which his publicity is gained. It is the trade mark of his calling, the guarantee of honest merchandising and the advertisements of these reputable dealers are readable.

And advertising brings in larger returns. It is impossible to find a method that will make more dollars, for the investment, as can be brought out in trade directed by intelligent advertising of honest merchandise or honest needs or wants. The money spent in this way reaches directly more people than could possibly be found by any other square method.

And there are countless illustrations where it has been shown that advertising pays. There is a recent case where a local man applied for the fulfillment of a desire through the classified columns of this paper. The cost, entirely, was less than a dollar, for four insertions. The first day's paper brought him thirty-eight replies and during the running of the advertisement there were fifty responses. It would have been impossible to have gained what was thus gained, in any other manner, than by the expenditure of a great many times this much money.

Advertising and Religion.

Advertising in some aspects is a good deal like religion. Those who "get religion" from an evangelistic burst of oratory are often disappointed in its effect upon their lives. Spasmotic advertisers are frequently the converts of an advertising enthusiast who predicts great and immediate results in the business.

There are backsliders in advertising as well as religion. The percentage is probably just as high and they all blame "the religion" instead of their understanding. Real advertising must be as much a part of the business itself as true religion is of right living.—Paul W. Minnick.

EXCELLENT ADDRESS GIVEN ON NEGRO SITUATION IN SOUTH

Rev. Ed Schmidt Tells of Work Being Done Through The Lutheran Missions.

Rev. Ed Schmidt delivered an excellent address at the German Lutheran church upon the negro mission work in the south. Rev. Mr. Schmidt is interested in this work at New Orleans and has charge of the St. Paul station which is one of the forty mission churches, which have been organized under the direction of the St. Paul church. The speaker said that the work was being done among the colored people in the southern states through these missions and that the negro was being placed on the higher plane of living through Christianity than by any other one source.

The majority of the negroes are illiterate but when Christianized become better citizens and command greater respect of the white population in spite of the race hatred which is so prevalent in those states.

The first mission work among the negroes by the Lutheran church was done about thirty years ago when two missionaries went to the south but were advised against starting the mission work, as they were told that it would be impossible to do much good for the colored people. However, the work was started and the benefits have been great and far reaching.

At a conclusion of the address a collection was taken up for the station in charge of Rev. Mr. Schmidt, and about $160 was contributed. This will be used in repairing the mission building.

FORMER LOCAL LIGHT MEN SELL LEBANON HOLDINGS

C. E. Layton Will Continue to Serve as Manager of the Combined Plants.

The Lebanon Daily Reporter has the following regarding the disposition of the Citizens Light and Power Company which was owned by the local Gas and Electric plants.

A deal by which the Citizens Electric Light & Power Co. disposes of its entire holdings in Lebanon including the light, heat and ice business, was closed yesterday. The transfer has already been made, but the officers of the old company will continue for the present to administer the affairs of the corporation.

The company which disposes of its holdings here is composed of T. C. McReynolds of Kokomo, president; T. A. Scott, of Cadiz, Ohio, vice president; C. E. Layton, Lebanon, secretary-treasurer; W. W. Layton, of Covington, Ind.; C. W. McReynolds of Kokomo; P. W. Reynolds of Defiance, O.; George W. Norwood of Lebanon. They acquired the local light plant in December, 1910, the ice plant Jan. 1 of this year and the heating plant a few weeks ago.

Mr. Layton, who has had charge of the local plant for some time, stated this morning that he was not at liberty to divulge the identity of the purchasers, but declared that they were among the best operators in the country. They own similar properties at various points and have plenty of capital back of them. Mr. Layton assures the people of Lebanon that the new owners have the financial ability and the reputation and experience as operators to make the plants here among the best and most efficient in the state.

C. E. Layton will be retained as general manager, which will be gratifying news to his host of Lebanon friends. The purchasers could not secure a more competent man for the place or one who is more popular with the people. In the time he has had charge of the light plant he has made great improvement in the service and has increased the local business wonderfully. There will be general satisfaction that he is to continue with the new corporation.

Here is one of the most stylish models of the season. The dress has the fashionable front closing and the design is quite easy to carry out. The waist is made with removable chemi-sette and the skirt is cut in five gores.
The collar and revers add charm to the garment and the pointed turn-up cuffs are a pretty feature. Revers and cuffs are made of satin or other contrasting material. For developing the model serge, mohair, pongee or linen may be considered among the available materials.The pattern (5837) is cut in sizes 32 to 42 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 6 1/2 yards of 36 inch material, 5/8 of a yard of 24 inch satin or contrasting fabric and 5/8 of a yard of 22-inch all-over.To procure this pattern, send 10 cents to Economic Loss From Tuberculosis.

According to Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University, there are about 3-000,000 on the "sick list" each day in the United States, and of these one-sixth, or 500,000, are victims of tuberculosis. Prof. Fisher estimates that one-half of the consumption victims are totally incapacitated for labor, and points out that, considered collectively as a matter of dollars and cents, the economic loss to the country, placing the value of each person's services at $700 a year, reaches the astounding total of $175,000,000 per annum. The additional loss through the purchase of medicines and special foods, doctors' bills and, finally, undertakers' bills, brings the total economic loss up to twice that figure.

Fruit and Vegetable Juices.

Fruit and vegetable juices, on account of their organic salts, are of great value as cleansers and in the elimination of waste water from the system. It is always best to remove pulp of fruit before eating, as the cellular walls are indigestible and fill the system with waste matter. It is always the cellular walls that cause indigestion and not the fruit juice.

POULTRY

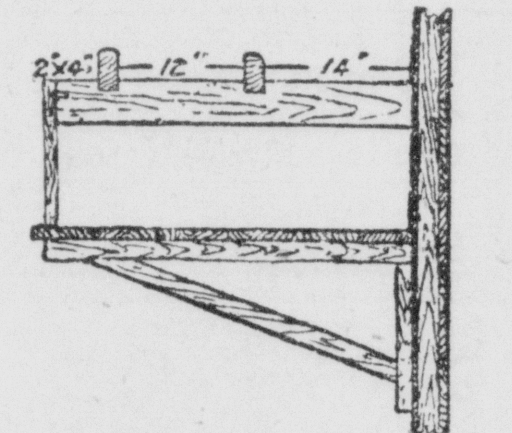

ADVANTAGES OF TRAP NESTS

By Use of Device Number of Eggs Laid by Each Hen May Be Ascertained Without Trouble.The primary object of using trap nests is to develop a heavy laying strain. It has been found by the use of trap nests that the number of eggs laid per hen in an average flock varies from 40 to 245. Without using trap nests, the results from such a flock would be uncertain and probably unsatisfactory. It is the object of the poultryman to breed and build up the strain which lays the heaviest, by breeding to the heavy producers.

For fanciers, the trap nest is indispensable on account of the fact that in the ordinary pen there are from six to 12 females to one male. If trap nests are used, and there are as many as there are females in the pen, it is possible to distinguish each hen's eggs, while if the trap nests are not used, this is impossible.The use of trap nests goes far to prevent the hens forming the habit of egg-eating. They are likely to form this habit if kept in limited quarters.

If so kept, they are probably not given the very best food, and probably not enough of it, especially animal food.The accompanying drawings of a bank of trap nests are self-explanatory. The nests are built without any top or bottom. The hen enters through the back of the nest, brushing under the hanging wire, which releases the door. She then passes on to the nest compartment toward the front end.
To inspect the nest, and to remove the hen, ascertain her number, and secure the eggs, the front door is simply unbuttoned, and let down. It will be noticed that the two doors are fastened together with a cord, so that when the front door is let down, the trap is automatically set again. The hen will find it difficult to leave through the back door at this time, as the hanging wire permits her to go one way only. These are so simple that in making them in almost any quantity, the material should not cost over 15 cents, at most, per trap nest.

PERCH SPACE FOR CHICKENS

Small Hens Should Be Allowed Six Inches, While Larger Birds Should Be Given Eight.As a general rule, small hens should have about six inches of perch space, while the larger hens should be allowed eight inches. In the winter they huddle closer together, but in the summer there should be plenty of room to allow them to spread out.Perches should be 12 inches apart and not closer than 15 inches to the wall or ceiling. Show birds, especially Leghorns or similar type, should be kept at a greater distance from walls and ceilings. Many good birds are spoiled by "brooding" their tails against the walls.There are several methods of making movable perches. One of the most common is by hinging them to the wall at the back.

Fertility of Eggs.

The disposition of the male bird has considerable to do with the fertility of the eggs. A male that is greedy and quarrelsome is apt to drive hens away from the feed and gulp down more than is good for him. Such males become overfat and consequently sluggish.On the other hand, the too gallant male will stand back while the hens are helping themselves. His condition is as bad as the greedy bird, for he is undefeated and has not the proper strength to fertilize.

Hen Not Sentimental.

There is no sentiment in a hen.
Her only object in life is to get enough to eat. If she is given that and a warm, well-ventilated house to sleep in all night, a dry sheltered place in winter, she will do the rest.

CHAPTER XXVI.

A New Arrival.

Thrice had the old nurse, Marie, assisting her mistress that night for the banquet, sighed; a number of times striven to hold my lady's eye and attention, but in vain. Only when the adorning process was nearly completed and the nurse knelt with a white slipper, did she, by a distinctly detaining pressure, succeed in arresting, momentarily, the other's bright strained glance.

"Is anything the matter?" My lady's absent tone did not invite confidences. "My Lady—" the woman hesitated; yet seemed anxious to speak. "I—my Lady," she began again; with sign of encouragement from the Governor's daughter, would have gone on; but the latter, after waiting a moment, abruptly withdrew the silken-shod foot.

"The banquet! It is past the hour!" An instant she stood, not seeing the other or the expression of disappointment on the woman's countenance; then quickly walked to the door. Nor, as the Governor's daughter moved down the long corridor, with crimson lips set hard, was she cognizant of another face that looked out from one of the many passages of the palace after her—the face of a younger woman whose dark, spying eyes glowed and whose hands closed at sight of the vanishing figure!

The sound of gay voices, however, as she neared the banquet hall, perforce recalled my lady to a sense of her surroundings; at the same time a figure in full court dress stepped from the widely opened doors. An adequate degree of expectancy on his handsome countenance, my lord, the Marquis, who had been waiting, lover-fashion, for the first glimpse of his mistress that evening, now gallantly tendered his greetings.

Seldom, perhaps, had the ancient banquet hall presented a more festive appearance. Fruits and flowers made bright the tables; banners medieval, trophies of many victories, trailed from the ceiling; a hundred lights were reflected from ornaments of crystal and dishes of gold. On every hand an almost barbaric profusion impressed the guests with the opulence of the Mount; that few could sit in more state than this pale lord of the North, or few queens preside over a scene of greater splendor than their fair hostess, his daughter!

With feverish semblance of spirit, she took her place; beneath the keen eyes of his Excellency responded to sallies of wit, and only when between courses the music played, did her manner relax. Then, leaning on her elbow, with cheeks aflame and downcast eyes, she professed to listen to dainty strains—the sighing of the old troubadours, as imitated by a group of performers in costume on a balcony at one end of the hall.

"Charming!" The voice was the Marquis'; she looked at him, though her eyes conveyed but a shadowy impression. "You have quite recovered from your trip to the dungeons?"

"Quite!" With a sudden lift of the head.

"The dungeons?" His Excellency's gaze was on them. "I understand," looking at Elise, "you had a slight adventure?"

"To get lost? Say, rather, it was venturesome to have attempted to return alone."

"Just what I said to the Lady Elise!" broke in the Marquis. "And to have left us at a most interesting moment!"

"Interesting?" The Governor's steel-gray eyes regarded the speaker inquiringly.

"We were about to visit the Black Seigneur!"

"Ah!" A look flashed from his Excellency to his daughter; her glance failed to meet it.

Yet paler, she turned over-hurriedly to the Marquis. "What is that air they are playing now?" His response she heard not, was only conscious that across the board, the eyes of her father still scrutinized; studied!

At length, however, the evening wore away; a signal from his Excellency, and of one accord they rose and crossed to the star-illuminated cloister adjoining. There at the entrance, my lady, who toward the last had listened with an air of distraction, hardly concealed, to her noble suitor's graceful speeches, held back, and, as the others went in, quickly effected her escape and hastened to her own apartments.

"At last!" She threw back her arms; breathed deeper. Ah, mon pere, you are hard—unyielding as the iron doors and bars of your dungeons!" She pressed her hand to her forehead. "And I can do nothing—nothing!" she repeated; stood for a moment motionless and then mechanically moved toward the bell-rope at the other end of the chamber. But the hand she started to raise was arrested; through the slightly opened door to the adjoining apartment, she heard voices; words that caused her involuntarily to listen.

"I have made up my mind to tell her ladyship, Nanette!" The old nurse was speaking, in tones that betrayed excitement and anxiety. "It is, to say the least, embarrassing for me—your coming here! Yes, the daughter of Pierre Laroche, who emigrated to the English Isles! Who has always shown disloyalty for the monarchy at home!"

My lady, surprised, drew nearer; caught the answer, which came in tones deep and strong.

"At least, aunt, you are frank!"

"I must be! Under ordinary circumstances, I should be glad; of course, the child of my dead sister ought to be welcome."

"So I thought," dryly, "when I stopped off a few days ago to see you, on my way to Paris."

"If you had let me know, it is I who would have gone somewhere, near by, to have seen you!" was the troubled reply. "His Excellency—what would he say if he knew? Pierre Laroche, who has been called friend of privateersmen, perhaps even of the Black Seigneur, himself! I should have gone to his Excellency at once and asked if he objected, only you begged me not, and—"

"Were you so anxious to be rid of me?" quickly.

"I shouldn't speak as I do now, perhaps, only—"

"Only?"

"Your conduct, since you have been here—"

"What do you mean?" The other's tone had a sudden defiant ring.

"It is not seemly for a girl of your age and condition to be out alone so late, nights!"

"I just went down into the town to get something," was the careless response, "and the sands looked so attractive—"

"That's no excuse! And now," the old nurse's voice showed a trace of embarrassment, "we've had our visit, and you had better carry out your plan of going to Paris."

"You want me to leave here—at once?" The girl drew her breath sharply.

"Perhaps it would be as well."

"You treat me as if—I were a spy!" angrily.

"I don't wish to do that," returned the woman in a constrained tone. "But now, after so many years of service with her ladyship! And her mother, the former lady of the Mount! If I should incur the Governor's displeasure—" the words died away. "If I can be of any help to you, if you need assistance—money—"

"Money!" Nanette's derisive laugh rang out; was suddenly hushed by the tinkling of a bell!

"Her ladyship!"

For a few moments the Governor's daughter, now standing in the center of her apartment, heard no sound from the other room; then a timid footstep approaching the door was followed by an indecisive rap.

"Your ladyship rang?" inquired Marie, turning a half-guilty glance on her mistress.

"Yes! Did I hear voices, as I came in?"

"Did your Ladyship? I mean I was going to speak to your Ladyship. It's my niece!" suddenly. "On her way to Paris!"

"Your niece!" The Governor's daughter looked at the other. "And you—are pleased?"

"Your Ladyship—" The woman flushed.

"Of course, though, you must be! She is out there? Show her in!" quickly.

"But—"

"At once!"

"Very well, my Lady!" Marie's manner, however, was depressed as, stepping to the threshold, reluctantly she beckoned.

Erect, with mien almost antagonistic, Nanette entered and stood before the Lady Elise. The latter did not at once speak; for a few moments the observant brown eyes passed in quick scrutiny over her visitor; noting the aggressive brows; the broad, strong face; the self-assertive pose of the well-developed figure. A woman to do—to dare!—what?

"You wished to see me?" Nanette first spoke. Marie lifted an expostulatory hand. What bad manners, thus to notice. "You are from one of the islands?" she began.

"Yes."

"Say, my Lady!" broke in the old nurse. "I trust your Ladyship will pardon—"

"Never mind, Marie!" with a quick gesture. "Your aunt tells me you are on your way to Paris?"

"Yes—my Lady!" with the slightest hesitation before the last two words. "To seek a situation as lady's maid!"

"When are you leaving?"

"Tomorrow morning, your Ladyship!" interposed Marie quickly.

"So soon?" My lady continued to address the girl. "You have had experience?"

"No, my Lady!"

"Then how can you secure what you wish?"

"How? At least, I can try!"

"To be sure! You can try." My lady's eyes fell; she seemed to be thinking. "Still, it may be difficult; Paris is far away. And if you should fail," her fingers tapped nervously on the chair, "we are very busy at the Mount just now," she added suddenly, directing her glance full upon the other, "and there may be something here—"

"Here! Your Ladyship will keep me here!"

Marie made a movement as if to speak, but her niece intercepted her. "I will do my best, my Lady!"

"Very well! Then shall you have a trial?"

"Your Ladyship!" interposed Marie.

The Governor's daughter got up quickly. "I am very tired, Marie, and wish now to be alone! You need not remain—I shall not want you again tonight."

The old nurse murmured a dejected response; turned away.

"I thank your Ladyship. The girl's last look was one of indubitable satisfaction ere she followed her aunt from the room."

My lady stared after them. "Daughter of Pierre Laroche! Friend of the Black Seigneur!" Marie's words continued to ring in her ears. She threw herself into a chair; sat long very still, her eyes bent straight before her, on either cheek now a bright spot of color.

CHAPTER XXVII.

A Stroll on the Strand.

"You are in a hurry, Monsieur Beppo?" arms akimbo, Nanette, standing in an embrasure of the rampart, called out to the Governor's man as he passed by.

"Ah, Mistress Nanette," Beppo stopped readily enough, "I didn't see you at first."

"Because you have more important matters to think of," she laughed, showing her strong white teeth.

The fat old man looked pleased; a few days before, Nanette had flashed a radiant smile at him from her casement, and, ever since, he had been inclined to regard her with favor.

"Not more important, but duties that must be attended to! The wedding hour draws near." The island girl half turned her head; a shadow seemed to pass over the bold, sunburned features. "And her ladyship gives tomorrow a riding party for her guests—a last celebration before she is led to the altar. I am on my way now to arrange about the escort."

"A riding party!" Nanette spoke quickly. "You mean on horseback?"

"How else?" said Beppo. "It is a pastime her ladyship has always been very fond of, even as a child. In those days," not without an accent of self-importance, "it was my privilege—"

"Do they ride far?" interrupted Nanette with ill-suppressed eagerness.

"To the old Monastery St. Raulphe; an imposing ruin of tenth century architecture, my dear," he added pompously.

"And where is it?"

"Off the Paris highway, some ten miles from the Mount."

"Ten miles? And the country is beautiful? Not open; sandy, like the shore?"

"It partakes of a rugged grandeur." "With forests around?" quickly.

"Yes," indulgently. "You like forests, Mistress Nanette?"

"When they are thick and wild—" "Then would you like these?"

The girl asked no further questions; yet still Beppo lingered, his glance seeming loath to withdraw from this exuberant specimen of vigorous young womanhood. "Which way were you going, good Mistress Nanette?" he asked finally. "On second thoughts, I have a little time to spare and will walk along."

Nanette looked down from the rampart toward the sands and the shore, did not answer, and, more insinuatingly, Beppo repeated his proposal. Nanette started.

"La, Monsieur Beppo! I—I'm afraid it wouldn't do. There's my aunt," tossing her head, "that careful of me! Won't even let me go walking on the beach alone! Do you ever go walking on the beach, Monsieur Beppo?" she inquired suddenly, regarding him with an eloquent look.

"I—it has not been my custom," he murmured. "But," the fishy eyes growing brighter, "with you—if I might accompany you—"

"Oh, I didn't mean that! Oh, no! Of course not! And I couldn't think of it. My aunt—"

But when a few moments later, she turned, to walk quickly away, the round and shining face of Beppo, watching her disappear, wore not the look of a man who had allowed himself to be rebuffed.

Out of his sight, Nanette's expression changed to one of somber thoughtfulness; it lingered as she entered the palace, with free swing, mounted the steps to her mistress's apartments; was still there, when she took a bit of embroidery from a table and seated herself at the window of an antechamber, bent over her task. Soon, however, she stopped, to sweep abruptly cloth and colored silks from her lap to the floor, and, leaning forward, her firm, brown hands clasped over her knees, she seemed to be asking herself questions, or weighing some problem.

"It Gets Dark Early," Said the Girl.

"Yes; it is our only chance." In her eyes a steady glow replaced the varying lights, and, getting up with a sudden air of determination, Nanette crossed the room to where, near the door, stood a small desk. Glancing quickly around, she seated herself and, reaching for paper and pen, wrote carefully and somewhat laboriously a few words. She had finished and was contemplating the result of her eager efforts when a hand at the door caused her to dash down the pen and spring to her feet. As her aunt entered, Nanette took a few steps forward, and, bending to pick up her work from the floor, turned partly away and thrust the paper into the bosom of her gown.

"I came to tell you supper is ready," said Marie quietly.

At the table with her aunt the girl's manner was subdued and deferential; she observed the nicest proprieties, and bestowed on the other's slightest word a meed of attention calculated to soften the old woman's attitude and suspicions. And possibly succeeded; or, it may be, Marie's own conscience had begun to reproach her; for a number of days had passed and nothing had as yet occurred to justify the early apprehensions she had entertained. Under the circumstances the meal was a little prolonged; the first shafts of twilight had entered the courtyard and had begun to steal into the narrow chamber with darkening effect, ere of an accord the two women pushed back their chairs.

"It gets dark early," said the girl, "or time has passed quicker than I thought. Perhaps it was what you were telling me of the former lady of the Mount. She must have been very beautiful!"

"She was," answered the woman; "and as good as beautiful!"

"Heigh-ho!" Nanette sighed; through the window watched the shadows that like dark, trailing figures seemed creeping up the ancient wall to caress and linger on green leaves of vines, bright flowers and other living things. "But I suppose she had everything she wanted." The girl stirred restlessly. "What sort of a man is Monsieur Beppo, aunt?"

"Beppo?" Recalled as from a long train of recollections, the woman did not seem to notice the abruptness of the inquiry. "Oh, he is an old and faithful servant. For almost as many years as I have been here," with an accent of pride, "has he served at the Mount!"

"And his moral character, aunt?" demurely.

"Monsieur Beppo has a reputation for piety, no doubt deserved!" returned the woman, with an accent of surprise. "At any rate, he seldom misses a mass. But why do you ask?"

"Because I met him today and he invited me to walk with him this evening."

"He did?" Marie's mouth grew firmer. "And you?"

"I didn't exactly know how to refuse! He looked so old and respectable! I thought, too, you wouldn't mind and—I'm glad you think so well of him, aunt."

In the gathering gloom the listener's face seemed suddenly to grow graver; her eyes, which had returned to the girl's, expressed once more doubt and misgiving. With her glance lifted upward, however, Nanette did not seem to notice this quick change. A star-faint forerunner of a multitude of waiting orbs—peeping tamously down from above the gray, gaunt mass of stone, alone absorbed the girl's gaze and attention.

"Where were you thinking of going?" after a silence of some length the older woman asked.

"I don't recall that Monsieur Beppo mentioned," was the low-murmured response. "But, of course, aunt, if you object—"

"I do not know that I do," said the other slowly. "Only," as if the thought had suddenly come to her, "what were you writing at her ladyship's desk when I went to call you?"

"Writing?" Nanette regarded her blankly. "I don't understand you, aunt."

" weren't you writing something that you hid in your dress when I came?"

"No!" The girl looked full at the other; denied point-blank the accusation. "Now that you speak of it, I believe I did step to the desk," she answered glibly, "to look at some ornament; but as for writing, or darning to, I should not have presumed."

A low discreet rap at the door interrupted, and, with a whispered "There he is now!" Nanette cut short further argument by rising.

"She is not telling the truth!" For some time the woman stood looking down in gloomy thought after the two had gone. "What does it mean?" Moving to a peg, she took down a shawl. "What can it mean?" she asked herself again, and, wrapping the garment about her head and shoulders, left the room.

Half an hour later, at Beppo's side, on the beach, Nanette measured her steps to his; listened to the old man's platitudes, and even turned a not unwilling ear to sundry hints and innuendos of a tenderer nature. The girl was in her most complaisant mood, and, in his role of discreet gallant to young and blooming womanhood, the fat factotum strove to make the most of the opportunity. He sighed; bethought him of a sentimental tale, and carped of the beauty of the moon, then gilding the edge of the Mount's high towers! She answered; looked; but soon her eloquent glance swerved to the sands, dotted by desultory seekers of cockles, or belated stragglers from the shore, and fastened itself on a jutting point of the Mount.

Near it, before a large rock of peculiar shape, a man was engaged in that common nocturnal labor of the locality, digging! As the couple drew near, quickly he raised his gaze; almost at once let it fall; engrossed in his work, continued to toss the sand and stood over it searchingly. But when they had gone by, once more he straightened, and, at the same time, the girl looked back. Stalwart, black-bearded, a sailor by his dress, the fellow made a sign, and, apparently any doubt as to who he was vanished from Nanette's mind; for from the fingers of the free hand she held behind her, something fluttered to the beach.

Leaning to his implement, the man regarded the paper, but not until the girl's low laugh was heard, as she and Master Beppo vanished in the darkness, did he step forward and secure it.

"So! That was it!" Breathless, indignant, Marie, standing in the black shade of one of the Mount's projections, watched the fellow read and regard carefully the message in his hand; then tearing it, crumple the bits and thrust them toward his pocket as he walked off. "Brazen hussy! But her ladyship shall know; and if she doesn't pack you off, bag and baggage—Eh? What is that?" And springing forward, the woman pounced upon something that lay on the sand.

POSTAL BUILDING, SEYMOUR.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Charles Johnson is ill at his home on South Broadway.

Miss Anna Day is ill at her home on South Chestnut street.

Kenney Hassenzahn is sick at his home on North Ewing.

Miss Myrtle Huckleberry went to North Madison Wednesday afternoon where she will deliver four lectures on "Summer School Methods."

N. C. Denk, formerly with the French Bros. Bauer Ice Cream Co. of Cincinnati, has taken charge of the Seymour Ice Cream Co. as manager. Mr. Denk is an expert ice cream man. He will move his family to Seymour as soon as he can secure a house.

Herbert Platter presented the Republican office with a bunch of fine plants today. There are nine on one twig and are very large.

Fred Able has completed a new concrete garage at his home on Ewing street. The garage has been built in keeping with his handsome new residence.

The old building formerly occupied by the Western Union Telegraph company on East Second street is being moved to Glenhawn. Mr. Veshlage, the owner of the lot will erect a new building some time this fall.

Peter Ross has moved his tailoring establishment from the old location on Indianapolis avenue to the new room which was recently remodeled at the rear of the New Lynn Hotel. George Judd will occupy the room vacated by Mr. Ross with a cigar store.

Short funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Henry Otte, who died suddenly Monday morning, were held Wednesday afternoon from the family residence on South Poplar street, conducted by the Rev. E. H. Rogers, pastor of the German Lutheran church. The remains were interred at Riverview cemetery.

The remains of the late Joseph A. Fetting, Jr., arrived in Seymour this morning from Santa Barbara, California, and taken to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fetting on Jeffersonville avenue. Short funeral services were held there this afternoon and the remains were taken to the Catholic cemetery for burial.

The Seymour National Bank transferred all the money and other assets to their new building last night and this morning conducted the business from the new location. The furniture in the old building will be stored. The big safe will be placed in the McCoy-Thompson Garage, and in order to get it from the building it was necessary to tear out the front window.

Disciplining Junior

By VIRGINIA DUPUY HOLTON

Allan Wetherell smiled a grim response to his brother-in-law's cheery greeting as the two men met on the 8:53 suburban train.

"What's on your mind, Al? Is your favorite stock down this morning?" Jennings bantered.

"Nothing so easy as that!" Wetherell answered as they found seats together. "Fact is, Hugh, I want to put Junior to work during his summer vacation, and Barbara, so sweetly reasonable upon all subjects, actually suspects me of the cruelty of the proverbial stepmother. Why, she acts like a tigress defending its young every time I speak of it!"

"And I take it that you mentioned it this morning," Jennings observed with a comical sidelong glance at his companion.

"It is a sad commentary upon parents," Wetherell continued, disregarding the lighter vein of his brother-in-law's remarks, "but it would be better for our children if they were away at school all the year, instead of part of it. Frankly, Hugh, I could manage Junior all right alone, but to manage his mother, too, is beyond my talent!"

"I see," said Jennings, grasping the situation, but wondering that his wife, who was Wetherell's sister, had shown, in the bringing up of their boy, now grown, none of that consummate perfection in the art of training children that Wetherell so courageously boasted of.

"I'll bet Lucy never interfered when you tried to discipline Horace—now, did she?"

A quick reflection upon the success his own boy had turned out to be, convinced Jennings that his wife had not interfered.

"No, I must confess that I carried out practically all of my own ideas in Horace's upbringing."

Unaccountably his brother-in-law's admission did not bring the comfort Wetherell had counted upon. Somehow the words sounded offensively smug.

Hang it all! Horace had never been a boy of much spirit, anyway! Ten to one he had never needed any disciplining!

Even the Dinner Attained to a Rank Above an Every-Day Affair.

"Junior gets home from school today, doesn't he?" Jennings inquired, squaring himself to peruse his paper.

"Yes, he does, and instead of its being the happy event it should be, it threatens the harmony of the household. Why, the young cub regards his vacations as nothing more than long, legitimate entertainments. Unfortunately for him, we have enough to keep him in idleness and spending money."

"Oh, I've known boys to emerge from under even those handicaps," Jennings laughed.

"I suppose you refer to your own offspring," the disgruntled Wetherell replied. "I congratulate you to the extent that you had no interference from a well-meaning but mollycoddling mother!"

With the complacency of a man with the credit balance on his side, Jennings again spread his paper before him.

A moment later he was startled from the contemplation of an article by an explosive exclamation from Wetherell.

"By Jove! I've an inspiration! I'll get Lucy to help me win Barbara over! I'll ask her to mention her thankfulness that she left her boy's bringing up to you. She might also suggest something to the effect that fathers naturally understand boys better—that with little girls it is different."

Wetherell's face had already brightened with the idea. His spirits took a mercurial leap.

"I've a notion to take the next train back and get Lucy to go over to see Barbara before Junior gets home."

"Oh, no! no, I wouldn't do that! Jennings quickly protested.

"Why not?"

"Because—because," Jennings began lamely, "never take any important step without mature consideration." He finished.

"Nonsense, man! That's good advice for some cases, but it doesn't apply to this one. I've a better idea yet. I'll telephone Lucy the minute I get to the office!"

"What's the use of being in such a hurry about it?" Jennings demanded, now openly exasperated.

Wetherell looked at him in surprise. "Why, what are you so worked up over?"

"I'll tell you what," Jennings laid his hand upon Wetherell's arm as though to detain him, "just leave it to me and I'll fix it for you. I'll see that Barbara gets the advice if I have to give it to her myself," he declared, implying a magnanimous sacrifice upon his own part.

In their conversation quickly veered in another direction as a fellow suburbanite joined them.

That night as Wetherell rounded the corner that brought his house into view, his spirits mounted in anticipation of seeing his boy.

And when the click of his key in the door brought a veritable young athlete in appearance, pouncing upon him with childlike affection, Wetherell forgot the dead issue in the sublimity of that moment.

As he regarded the handsome, boyish face before him, with its fearlessly frank eyes, he came more nearly than ever before to an understanding of his wife's tender solicitude for the boy.

Barbara's kiss and smile of welcome seemed if anything a little heartier than usual this evening, as though doubly anxious that all should be in happy accord.

Even the dinner attained to a rank above an every-day affair. Ellen, the cook, adored the boy who had, in years gone by, plundered her sweetmeats at the most inopportune moments and tantalized her in every conceivable way. Nevertheless, in his years away at school, her happiest time had been when preparing the contents of a "feast box" to be sent him.

Tonight there appeared in goodly array all of Junior's favorite dishes, with Ellen carefully scanning his plates upon their return to the kitchen, and a solicitous inquiry from the serving maid as to how "Master Junior" was enjoying himself. Of this he assured her in person at the end of the meal.

Then he joined his parents for a chat. Flinging himself upon the couch, piled with pillows, he exclaimed:

"Gee, but this is the the first real soft place I've lain on since I left here!"

"Why, was your bed at school hard?" Mrs. Wetherell's motherly instinct instantly asserted itself.

"Well, they're not exactly like this, mother. But you could hardly expect that!"

"I told you I ought to have gone back with him and settled him, Allan!" casting a glance of mingled regret and reproach toward her husband.

Suddenly Junior spoke: "Say, folks, do you know what I'm going to do this summer?"

Wetherell felt a gloomy apprehension settle upon him. The achievement of disciplining his son during this vacation seemed suddenly defeated.

"No, what, dear?" It was his mother who answered. Her voice was of a syrupy sweetness that already implied her assent.

"I'm going to work!" the boy announced.

His father, after the first startled moment of comprehension, experienced a pang of remorse, known only to a father who has underestimated a son.

While his mother, with the sensitiveness of a weathervane to the slightest change of wind, shifted her attitude to meet the prevailing mood of her boy.

"So you think you would like to try your wings a little, do you, dear?"

His wife's tone of docility amazed Wetherell no less than his son's words.

Upon reaction, however, his brain fairly sang a psalm of joy! By Jove! a boy that could be trusted to discipline himself was a wonder!

The proud father was even considering an automobile as a reward for such virtue, when his cherubic offspring spoke his answer:

"It's not exactly that," he explained, "but you see I'm up for a certain stint at school and they've put up the stunt that in order to qualify we've got to work for two months during our vacation!"—Mother's Magazine.

Compensations.

He (mournfully)—I wonder, when a wife gets all her rights, as you women see 'em—

She (traculently)—Well?

He—I wonder if any judge will say a husband has a right to go through his wife's pockets?

Would Be Terrible.

"The doctors are going to operate on her."

"What's wrong?"

"Something about the coat of her stomach, I understand."

"I hope they don't find it out of style. She'd never get over that."

His Understanding of It.

"Bobby, what was the preacher's text?"

"Something about its being easier for a camel to go through the Iowa needle than for a rich man to go to heaven."

Not Very Deep.

"Didn't you tell me you bought a lot at Mosquito Beach?"

"I did."

"How deep is it?"

"About three feet at high water."

SOCIAL EVENTS.

W. C. T. U.

Columbia's Crusade was presented most successfully yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Jno. A. Ross.

Every member was prepared and the beautiful program was given as published. The large number present highly appreciated the song and drill recitations. The committee Miss Dora Deppert and Miss Emma Ross received deserved compliments and were asked to repeat at a future time.

The musical numbers were a delight to all present. Ice cream, cake and fruit were served.

MOONLIGHT PICNIC.

The division of the Woodstock Sunday School which is in charge of Mrs. M. E. Baker, social chairman, will give a moonlight picnic this evening on the church lawn. Several months ago the Sunday School was divided into two sections and entered into a contest to give the best social. The first division entertained on May 1.

TWELVE O'CLOCK DINNER.

Mrs. M. C. Black entertained with a twelve o'clock dinner Tuesday at her home on St. Louis Avenue in honor of her birthday anniversary. An elegant dinner was served which was greatly enjoyed. The out of town guest was Miss Minnie Mann of Cincinnati.

LAWN PARTY.

John Himler gave a lawn party Wednesday evening at his home on Walnut street in honor of Miss Rose Rapp of Jeffersonville, who is the guest of Mrs. Phil Redding.

There were fourteen present and a delightful evening was spent. Refreshments were served.

PICNIC SUPPER.

Mr. and Mrs. Demas Perlee and their guests, Miss Ethel Perlee and Mrs. May Dodd of Indianapolis and Mr. and Mrs. Byford Cunningham, enjoyed a picnic supper Wednesday at Tanglewood.

Tent Meeting.

A tent meeting will begin 9 miles south of Seymour by No. 2 School house Saturday, July the 27th. All day meeting and basket dinner Aug. the 4th. Everybody welcome.

Rev. J. H. Bennett.

Don't bake on Saturday when you can get everything home made at the market at the Public Service Co. Saturday, 9 a. m. given by the Ladies' Aid of the M. E. church.
